This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1897 Excerpt: ...of years before our era are now found in the laudatory hymns and prayers of Christian Churches, it is simply because they have been unblushingly appropriated by the Latin Christians, in the full hope of never being detected by posterity. Everything that could be done had been done to destroy the original Pagan manuscripts and the Church felt secure. Christianity has undeniably had her great Seers and Prophets, like every other religion; but their claims are not strengthened by denying their predecessors. Listen to Plato: Know then, Glaucus, that when I speak of the production of good, it is the Sun I mean. The Son has a perfect analogy with his Father. Iamblichus calls the Sun the image of divine intelligence or Wisdom. Eusebius, repeating the words of Philo, calls the rising Sun (avaTorf) the chief Angel, the most ancient, adding that the Archangel who is polyonymous (of many names) is the Verbura or Christ. The word Sol (Sun) being derived from solus, the One, or the He alone, and its Greek name Helios meaning the Most High, the emblem becomes comprehensible. Nevertheless, the Ancients made a difference between the Sun and its prototype. Socrates saluted the rising Sun as does a true PSrsi or Zoroastrian in our own day; and Homer and Euripides, as Plato did after them several times, mention the Jupiter-Logos, the Word or the Sun. Nevertheless, the Christians maintain that since the oracle consulted on the God Iao answered: It is the Sun, therefore The Jehovah of the Jews was well known to the Pagans and Greeks; and Iao is our Jehovah. The first part of the proposition has nothing, it seems, to do with the second part, and least of all can the conclusion be regarded as correct. But if ...

We've started our countdown to National Handbag Day on October 10, and that means we'll have special features for you every day, right up to the big event! Today, we're here to talk about the intersection of celebrity and accessories, and more specifically, how the two can become intertwined in public consciousness for years. The kinds of stars who carry a particular bag do a lot to shape the market's perception of it and the designer who created it, which is why so many brands give out free bags to stars now: they're hoping to create positive associations. In the cases you see below, though, things came along a little bit more naturally. You can't rush love, after all. Think of a bag-celeb duo we missed? Let us know in the comments!
